THE BOY WHO LIVED

By Ava, Best Reporter in the Wizing World

Two days ago, on the 31st of October, You-Know-Who was defeated by a young boy named Harry Potter. Unfortunately, You-Know-Who committed murder. The Dark Lord has murdered Lily and James Potter, parents of Harry, the small infant. He turned up at Godrics Hollow, home of the Potters. He also tried to kill the young Potter, Harry but failed. The Dark Lord's power broke and he has vanished. It is unknown why he committed the murders. Harry Potter is now known as The Boy Who Lived.

Yesterday, after finding out the Dark Lord has gone, wizards and witches have been celebrating in the streets with colourfull cloaks and hats on. All over Britain, wizards and witches have been hugging everyone they see, even muggles. "Cheers to The Boy Who Lived!" A joyous Arthur and Molly Weasley cheered in the Leaky Cauldron. People in large groups set off sparks from their wands (or as the muggles say 'fireworks').

Humerously, our celebrating confused the muggles and we even made it to their news. Muggles thought our owls were strange; however, they were only sending messages. Sparks from wands were mistaken for shooting stars. Heatherlin Woodcock, a muggle expert told us, "We need to not get too excited with what is happening because we might spill our secret to the muggles!"

Thankfully, we can look forward to years of peace because the Dark Lord has vanished. We shall thank Harry Potter for this amazing event. Young Harry Potter will be famous in the wizing world for his ability to fight off the Dark Lord with nothing but his small, infant hands and eyes like his mother's. Professor Albus Dumbledore states, "He is a baby, no one would think he could make a powerful, evil wizard disappear."
