By Emily Rose fab reporter for the Daily Prophet

On October 1981, You-Know-Who was finally destroyed by a young child named Harry Potter. After arriving at Godrics Hollow, he proceeded to the Potter's house. At the crime scene The Dark Lord decided to kill the Potters. Sadly, Lilly and James Potter Died whereas their son Harry survived. When killing You-Know-Who was dead leaving the unknown mystery of Harry surviving the killing curse ...

Yesterday morning, all over the country the word of You-Know-Who's death zoomed quickly. Soon, many people sprang to the streets in vibrant cloaks gathering in large groups. Rejoiced some of us witches and wizards have been hugging the silly muggles. "Celebrate for He Who Must Be Named is dead," called Dedalus Diggle.

Humorously, our celebrations have fuzzle wuzzled the muggles and have made their news. They think our owls have changed their behavior when we were only sending letters. Funnily, the sparkes out our wands are thought to be shooting stars. Mr Weasly, a muggle expert says, "Since I know a lot about the interesting muggles, I can assure you that we need to be casus."

Gratefully, we can relax now our days of peace have begun. Not surprisingly, Harry Potter will go down in history as there will be books about him. Harry has even got a name (The Boy Who lived). Finally, we met Albouse Dumbledore and he said " We can not expect the future, the future is unknown."
