Who You Know is Who Knows Where

By Max the star reporter of The Daily Prophet

On 31st October 1981, You Know Who was finally defeated by a young boy called Harry Potter. He arrived at Lily and James Potter's house in Godric's Hollow and killed them for an unknown reason. Harry defeated You Know Who by You Know who trying to kill Harry. Harry was able to make You Know Who's power disappear and since his powers vanished he vanished too and died. We've been celebrating since halloween night because that was the best day of the magical world.

Yesterday, after finding out You Know Who died we celebrated. In the streets, we went around hugging people and we even started hugging muggles because that was to show how much we hated You Know Who. "Rejoice for You Know Who has gone at last! Everybody should be celebrating this happy happy day," a joyful Wizard told our reporter on a London street. Everyone was in big, colourful cloaks because we are wizards and witches throwing paint around.

Humorously, our celebrations confused the muggles and it even made their news. Loads of our owls were flying around sending people letters and the muggles thought the owls had unusual behaviour. The muggles thought our celebrations sparks were shooting stars, while speaking to Mr Todd, a muggle expert, he exclaimed, "We need to ensure our celebrations because we don't give away our secret to the muggles."

Thankfully, now You Know Who is dead we can finally have peace in the magical world. Harry Potter will be famous people will write books about him. Since Harry destroyed You Know Who's power and killed him he has been named the boy who lived. "I am heartbroken Lily and James Potter died but glad Harry survived because he drained out You Know Who's power," Professor Dumbledore told our reporter.
