

The Daily Prophet

VICIOUS VOLDEMORT VANISHES

By Tyler, the most magical, magnificent reporter

On the 31st October 1981, You-Know-Who was beaten and vanished because of the Potter's son. Two days ago, on Halloween night, the dark wizard turned up at Godric's Hollow where Lily and James Potter lived and shriveled. Whereas his parents copped, Harry Potter stayed alive with only a scar on his head. Shockingly, the reason of why You-Know-Who killed Lily and James Potter and how Harry survived is unknown. As far as we are concerned, the dark lord's evil terror has ended with his power broke.

Yesterday, after finding out Harry survived whereas his parents didn't, we celebrated and cheered. In the streets, we came out of Hogwarts in colourful cloaks being unable to show our true identity. Mysteriously, wizards and witches in large groups next to the road hugged one another even muggles! "We should all celebrate this elated day for You-Know-Who is gone at last!" an overjoyed wizard told us.

Hilariously, our cheerful day made the muggles an unusual event. From the morning until midnight, muggles reported our owls swooping around only sending messages. Secretly, we hid our wands behind our cloaks unless time was right. Eventual at night, we put our wands up and flabbergasted the muggles because the spell was a downpour of shooting stars. While speaking to Mr. Clark, a muggle expert, he explained, "If I was you, you should let the shooting stars stop because muggles will get mysterious about us."

Thanks to Harry Potter, You-Know-Who has gone at last and now there will be peace. Surely, we have to owe the peace to our beloved Harry Potter since he is the chosen one for all good. Mostly admired, people will read about him in good books from this day forward. Whilst hiding, Dumbledore pronounced, "After all little Harry has done for us, he deserves to be in hogwarts. When he's older of course."

